FAITH AND THE SEARCH FOR GOD

FAITH AND THEOLOGY

CHAPTER THREE - continued

I DELIVERED TO YOU WHAT I ALSO RECEIVED (cf. I Cor 15:3)

The sacraments and the transmission of faith

40. The Church, like every family, passes on to her children the whole store of her memories. But how does this come about in a way that nothing is lost, but rather everything in the patrimony of faith comes to be more deeply understood? It is through the apostolic Tradition preserved in the Church with the assistance of the Holy Spirit that we enjoy a living contact with the foundational memory. What was handed down by the apostles — as the Second Vatican Council states — “comprises everything that serves to make the people of God live their lives in holiness and increase their faith. In this way the Church, in her doctrine, life and worship, perpetuates and transmits to every generation all that she herself is, all that she believes”.

Faith, in fact, needs a setting in which it can be witnessed to and communicated, a means which is suitable and proportionate to what is communicated. For transmitting a purely doctrinal content, an idea might suffice, or perhaps a book, or the repetition of a spoken message. But what is communicated in the Church, what is handed down in her living Tradition, is the new light born of an encounter with the true God, a light which touches us at the core of our being and engages our minds, wills and emotions, opening us to relationships lived in communion. There is a special means for passing down this fullness, a means capable of engaging the entire person, body and spirit, interior life and relationships with others. It is the sacraments, celebrated in the Church's liturgy. The sacraments communicate an incarnate memory, linked to the times and places of our lives, linked to all our senses; in them the whole person is engaged as a member of a living subject and part of a network of communitarian relationships. While the sacraments are indeed sacraments of faith,[36] it can also be said that faith itself possesses a sacramental structure. The awakening of faith is linked to the dawning of a new sacramental sense in our lives as human beings and as Christians, in which visible and material realities are seen to point beyond themselves to the mystery of the eternal.

Fr. Leslie writes

A warm welcome to St Joseph the Worker, especially to our visitors and new parishioners. It is good to see you all. May I remind you to return any completed 200

Club forms that we gave out a few weeks ago? By returning them you are helping the parish and also having a chance for you to win a cash prize in our monthly draw. So it is a win-win for all of us.

Our celebration of Easter time continues today with messages of reassurance about the early Christian community and we now hear about the Holy Spirit. Jesus tells us that he will send us another Advocate, who will be with us always. As man, Jesus could only be in one place at one time and could not live for ever. The Holy Spirit will be with us always, even when we feel as if we are alone and helpless. He is the Spirit of Christ, and he continues the work that Jesus did among his disciples. He is the Spirit of Truth and he leads us to the truth as we try to listen to him and be guided by him.

In prayer it is the Spirit who brings God's word to life and gives us a deeper understanding of the truths of the Gospel. The Spirit also guides us in our daily lives, showing us the right courses of action in the situations we face and strengthening us to carry them out. He gives us encouragement and consolation in troubles and fears and he is our advocate when we sin, praying with us when we repent and seek forgiveness.

As we approach the end of the Easter Season, we can rejoice with this great Helper which Jesus sent to us. He comes to us every day when we go to him in prayer, read the word and receive him in the Eucharist. Come Holy Spirit fill our hearts with your love and peace.

Have a good Sunday and thank you.

Fr Leslie
